

New York-New Jersey Harbor Estuary Program

Estuaries are areas where salty ocean water meets fresh river water, resulting in rich, productive and diverse ecosystems where many types of plants and animals live. People are drawn to them because of their beauty, resources, and because they are ideal locations for ports. The NY-NJ Harbor Estuary is no exception and is home to one of the most vibrant metropolitan areas in the country and the world. We enjoy many benefits from the estuary that bolster our quality of life and economy, such as fishing, boating, swimming, and transportation.

Increasing populations and the Industrial Age have severely affected the health of this estuary. And, though significant legislative actions such as the Clean Water Act have done much to bring the harbor back from the brink, many ongoing problems have yet to be addressed. The New York-New Jersey Harbor Estuary Program (HEP) was established in 1988 under the Clean Water Act, to restore the resources we all share and depend on within the estuary. HEP is a partnership program including many government, non-government, and nonprofit partners. Our mission is to implement our management plan for the estuary.

Y YOUR WILDLIFE

The estuary is home or breeding ground to a diverse variety of plants and animals - the peregrine falcon, great blue heron, snowy egret, striped bass, blue crab, horseshoe crab, diamondback terrapin, muskrat, salt meadow grass, and swamp rose mallow, to name a few! Bring binoculars or a camera – and remember to leave only footprints and take nothing but photos!

PADDLE RESPONSIBLY

Paddling in the NY-NJ Harbor Estuary can be a safe and rewarding experience, though some areas are more challenging for beginners than others, and may require special preparation ahead of time. BE AWARE that in some areas, traveling long distances down the river is not yet possible due to insufficient portage sites before hazards such as dams, marked on the map. Further, many of our rivers are part of an active port - stay close to the shore! Be sure to follow the list of safety tips below, and always let a friend know where you are going and when you expect to return.

- Remember NY-NJ Harbor Estuary waters belong to everyone!
- Come prepared! Obtain the knowledge and skills necessary. • Know weather and water conditions and water temperature.
- File a float plan, visit www.floatplancentral.org.
- Avoid paddling alone. Consider joining a local boating program.
- Always wear your life jacket and carry a whistle. Paddle with the tide, check www.tidesandcurrents.noaa.gov.
- Stay visible. Be aware of what is in the water around you.
- Observe navigation rules of the road, USCG safety and security zones. Read more: http://homeport.uscg.mil/newyork.

LAUNCHES & LANDINGS

The guide features a collection of accessible boat launch and take-out points that enable people to travel the estuary in human-powered craft. The waterways offer a variety of experiences to satisfy differing interests and skill levels. All of us have done our best to ensure that the information provided here is accurate and useful, however it's a good idea to check the website or call the venue to verify launch conditions and permit requirements before visiting these sites. Even now, changes are occurring or planned in numerous locations. Many of these changes will create even greater accessibility. Also bear in mind that weather, tides and maintenance can alter site conditions.

The New York - New Jersey Harbor Estuary Paddling Guide highlights places where the public may launch human-powered boats in the estuary, ranging from the tidal waters of the Hudson at the North, east to the edge of Long Island Sound and Southwest to the Raritan River. These points of access allow the public to navigate our waters and to promote the appreciation, conservation, and protection of our waters and wildlife. Within the Harbor Estuary, there are multiple programs that have successfully advocated for harbor access and health.
